WASHINGTON—In the new farm bill, the administration had to choose between the farmer and the consumer and its decision was purely political.

Finding of Paul Redfern Is Denied

Art Williams, Aviator, Says That Newspaper-man's Story Untrue

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana.—(AP)—Another unsupported tale of the finding of Paul Redfern, long-lost aviator, in jungles of Brazil brought action by two governments and a denial by one of the purported rescuers Friday.

Alfred Harred, reporter, said through his newspaper, Banner, of Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, that he and Art Williams, former United States army flier, had found Redfern, crippled, in an Indian village in the Tumus Hu-mae mountains.

Williams, who has been making flights into the interior, denied the story, saying:

"I do not know Harred and he most certainly did not accompany me on my recent search."

Harred asserted that Redfern, who disappeared in 1927 on an attempt to fly alone from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio de Janeiro, was held in awe by an Indian tribe.

He said that he and Williams reached the tribal village after several days' hike through the jungle from the point where they landed their plane and that they talked to Redfern but were threatened by 500 natives with poisoned spears when they tried to induce him to leave with them.

They remained in the neighborhood four days, he asserted, but were unable to effect Redfern's escape.

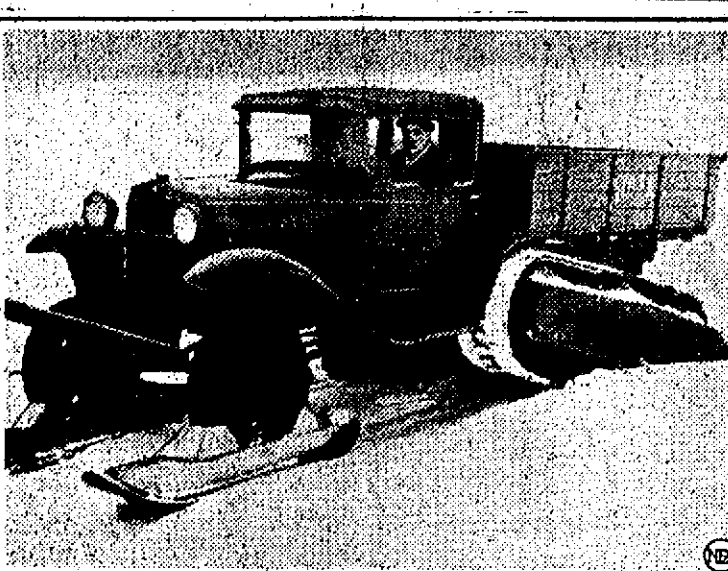

Williams' Contentions
Williams said he did not believe Redfern had been seen by anyone "from outside."

"He cannot come out for the simple reason that he cannot move without food and the Indians cannot bring him out because they do not know anything else but the immediate vicinity of their villages," the former army flier said.

"The Indians may be hostile but I do not think they killed him. Indians are also that far from his plane being preserved as something to worship. It was broken up and parts are probably in the huts of medicine men."

All the continents except Africa are represented among the student body at the University of Iowa this year.

This Truck Can Ski

Just a big gadabout, which refuses to stop for any kind of weather, is this freakish truck which the Russians call the "go anywhere" NATI-3. It looks as if it would be a handy vehicle for some of the blizzard-beaten communities in the U. S., and it has proved its worth in Russia's heavy snows this winter, with its front wheels mounted on skis and caterpillar treads covering the rear wheels. The truck, as shown here, can take a grade up to 38 degrees on dry ground and up to 25 degrees on snow.

Man Is Killed in Leap From Train

Harold Watson, 33, Plunges From Speeding
Passenger Train

WALNUT RIDGE, Ark.—(AP)—Seeking to escape authorities removing him to the State Hospital at Little Rock, Harold Watson, 33, of Portia, leaped to his death from a speeding Missouri Pacific passenger train near Popular Bluff, Mo., Thursday.

Almost every bone in the 200-pound body of the handcuffed farmer was broken. He jumped from a sleeping car vestibule and crashed headlong into a parallel track. He was killed instantly. A 55-minute delay resulted as the train halted until the body was found. It was taken to Hoxie.

Conductor R. E. Graham said the train was traveling at 60 miles an hour when Watson leaped. He had been taken to St. Louis for treatment, and was being returned by Deputy Sheriff Claude Norris, Dr. E. J. Cruise and J. R. Halley. They planned to take him to his home near here before continuing to Little Rock.

Just out of Popular Bluff, Graham went through the train and found Watson and his three attendants apparently dozing. One of them had trouble finding Watson's ticket, he said, and he told the party that he would be back for it later.

"I was about a dozen steps away from the party," the conductor said, "when I saw Watson lunge through the doorway, knocking the deputy sheriff out of the way. He looked around for an instant then opened the outer door of the vestibule and leaped head first."

3rd Party Threat by Townsend Group Is Removed Friday

Pension Organization Will Not Back Presidential Candidates

CONFLICT UNWANTED

2 Weeks Delay Is Sought in Probe of Townsend Idea by Congress

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—One threat of a third party movement faded Friday when Dr. F. E. Townsend announced that his old age pension organization will not back such a proposal.

Dr. Townsend declared neither will his group join movements in any state that would mean a conflict in the presidential primaries of either parties.

Delay Is Sought

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Comer Smith
Oklahoma City, lawyer for Dr. F. E.
Townsend of Townsend pension plan fame, Thursday telegraphed a request for a two weeks delay in the house investigation of the Townsend plan.

The request came from Representative Bell, Democrat, Missouri, who will be chairman of the investigating committee of eight. The other members will be appointed by Speaker Byrns Friday.

Smith's telegram said that Dr.
Townsend is convalescing from an attack of influenza and that it would be impossible for him to come to Washington at once. Smith added that both he and Dr. Townsend want to be present at the investigation.

Smith has announced that he is going to run for the United States Senate on a Townsend plan platform against Senator Gore.

He said that the committee most certainly would want to question Dr.
Townsend. He indicated that the delay would be granted if it is necessary.

Plaintiffs are William Heatheott and the authority of the judges and clerks court proceedings filed to prevent the holding of the election.

Orders Reduction in Workers for the WPA

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Lloyd Sharp, state works progress administrator, ordered Thursday night a reduction of 2,000 workers in Arkansas by February 29.

The reduction will leave approximately 12,000 persons employed by the WPA.

Sharp said the cut was necessary because the state is over its quota. Most of these to be discharged may be farmers who were placed on the rolls during the winter because they were food victims. He said it is now time for them to return to farming.

Scatter Farm Aid in Several Bills

Administration Moves to Keep Within Constitutional Limits

By BYRON PRICE
Chief Of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington, D. C.

The circuitous manner in which it is proposed to finance the new farm program raises a point about which there already are signs of growing political controversy.

Under the old AAA legislation, the farm benefits and the taxes to pay them were written into a single statute and so linked together as to show clearly that the purpose was to tax processors and give the money to farmers. Invalidating that law, the supreme court observed that "the word (taxation) has never thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another."

With that decision obviously in mind, congressional leaders now propose to scatter the new program through no less than three different statutes—one providing for the benefits, one authorizing an appropriation to pay them, and a third proposing certain taxes without specifying for what these taxes are to be used.

Some of the Republicans call this an effort "to get around the constitution," and the administration men reply that it is an effort "to keep the legislation clearly within the constitution."

Touches Social Security
Nor does the dispute apply to farm legislation alone. A railway pension suit already pending in the courts touches directly on this subject of diversing tax and benefit legislation.

And several quarters have pointed out that such a question may be involved also in the largest "new deal" money measure of them all—the social security act.

The original railway pension act provided both for railway pensions and for taxes to finance them. After the supreme court threw out that legislation, congress passed two separate bills, one providing for the benefits the other for the taxes.

Defending the constitutionality of this new arrangement recently in a District of Columbia court, the commissioner of internal revenue, Mr. Helvering, declared the taxes provided for were just like any other taxes not secured for any special group, but essential directly into the general fund of the treasury. The tax, he said, "bear

Measure Expected to Be Passed by House Late Friday

Strong Consumer-Protection Amendment Tackled On to Plan

CIVIL SERVICE PLEA

President Advocates Bill
to Place Postmasterships
Under Civil Service

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The house
Friday wrote a strong consumer-protection amendment into the new farm bill and pushed the measure ahead toward passage Friday night.

The amendment would direct Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to work toward pre-war "parity" income for the farmer without discouraging production to the point below the 1920-25 average domestic consumption.

President Roosevelt announced that the tax bill to finance the new farm program would be formulated after his return next week from his Hyde Park home.

Advocates Civil Service
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said Friday that he hoped legislation would be enacted placing all postmasterships under civil service.

Treasury Report
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Indications that President Roosevelt might submit his tax program to congress next week coincided Thursday night with a Treasury report of January revenue reflecting continued business gains.

Ordinary internal revenue collections last month jumped $38,626,126 over January, 1935, although the shutout of processing taxes through the Supreme Court's $10,000,000 decision brought a net drop of $100,000,000.

Treasury officials look for an increase of at least 25 per cent in income tax collections next month, when first quarter payments based on last year's business will fall due.

If the House passes the new farm bill Friday as predicted, the way will be cleared for consideration of taxes and relief—issues that now are the only big obstacles to adjournment by April 15.

Official Count Is Undecided at 3:40

Progress Is Slow—Decision May Come Late Friday Afternoon

At 3:40 p. m. Friday no decision on the official count of the Hot Springs county local option liquor election had been handed down, it was reported from the courthouse in Washington where the returns were being canvassed.

It was reported that progress was being made slowly and that an official count would probably not be announced until late in the day.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

There is one exercise that is of great importance in reducing weight. It involves turning the head slowly from left to right and back again, in the gesture that means "no," when food is passed.

All sorts of investigations have been made on this subject of reducing. And all indicate that the discipline required to maintain reduction in weight is to severe for most people who weigh too much.

Frequently, it is found that people who are overweight are descended from parents who are inclined to be overweight. Children who are overweight, in many instances, merely imitate the eating habits of their parents, who are overweight and eat too much.

The vast majority of people do not have enough will power, discipline, intelligence, or whatever it is that we the essentials of American life. She shows the wife as the victim of a never-resolved dualism in her own nature. On one side she was passionate, eager, warm-blooded; on the other, ascetic, puritanical, other-worldly.

The one nature drove her to China and a mission station; the other made her rebel at the confines of that existence and drove her to try to help human beings rather than save their immortal souls.

The book tells how the missionary's wife endured three decades of exile in China, hating the Orient and all its works, bearing seven children and burying four of them, longing passionately for the America she has lost—but, in the end, loving the Chinese people, giving herself for them, and presenting to them an unforgettable example of the way ordinary human kindness can work.

It is more than just an account of one woman's career. Mrs. Buck sees her heroine as typical of America itself—divided, flesh warring against spirit, confused and betrayed, and somehow capable of a tremendous and inspiring unselfishness and sacrifice.

Published by the John Day Co., the book sells for $2.50.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

When a boy won't go out and mix with the gang, his parents begin to worry and fuss. But when a girl turns puffy-cat and becomes a regular Polly-Sit-by-the-Fire, no one ever bothers about it.

It isn't a odd thing for growing girls to turn recluses. They are far better off for having congenial friends with the same interests. A mixture of good, because it is affirmed by those who have gone into the matter deeply that attitudes of both sexes are improved in future relationships if first approached in the group that skates, or sled-rides or picnics together, or even snow-balls, purling hats or splashes mud. The roughage of the group is good for the soul, as well as its courtesy and sportsmanship and oyalities.

But barring the boys, because it is not every girl who takes kindly to the mixed crowd, she needs company. It isn't good for her to turn in on herself and settle down to her parents' routine alone.

Age and Size Create Barriers
Once in awhile I get letters from mothers who realize this and ask for advice. As there are so many possible reasons for the "detached" child, I think it best to list some of them. Then other mothers may be able to decide where the trouble lies, if they too, have one who prefers her own company.

Sometimes it happens that Bessie—let us call her—being younger than her schoolmates. Younger, too, than her close neighbors. If so, she will not be welcomed by the rest. If she has been kept back by removal or illness, her place in school may be a torture to her. She will make no effort to be friendly herself, feeling sensitive as she does about the discrepancy.

Sometimes size counts too. If she has grown faster than the rest, she may think they do not want her. Or if she has a more-mature nature, even though of equal age, she may be inclined to spurn the friendship of "those babies" as she calls them.

Perhaps the family has ambitions to live in a newer and better neighborhood. The local children may understand and welcome her, but this has to be a fifty-fifty business, and Bessie will have to go half way. If she feels a misfit in her new surroundings, she won't make the effort. Then all is lost.

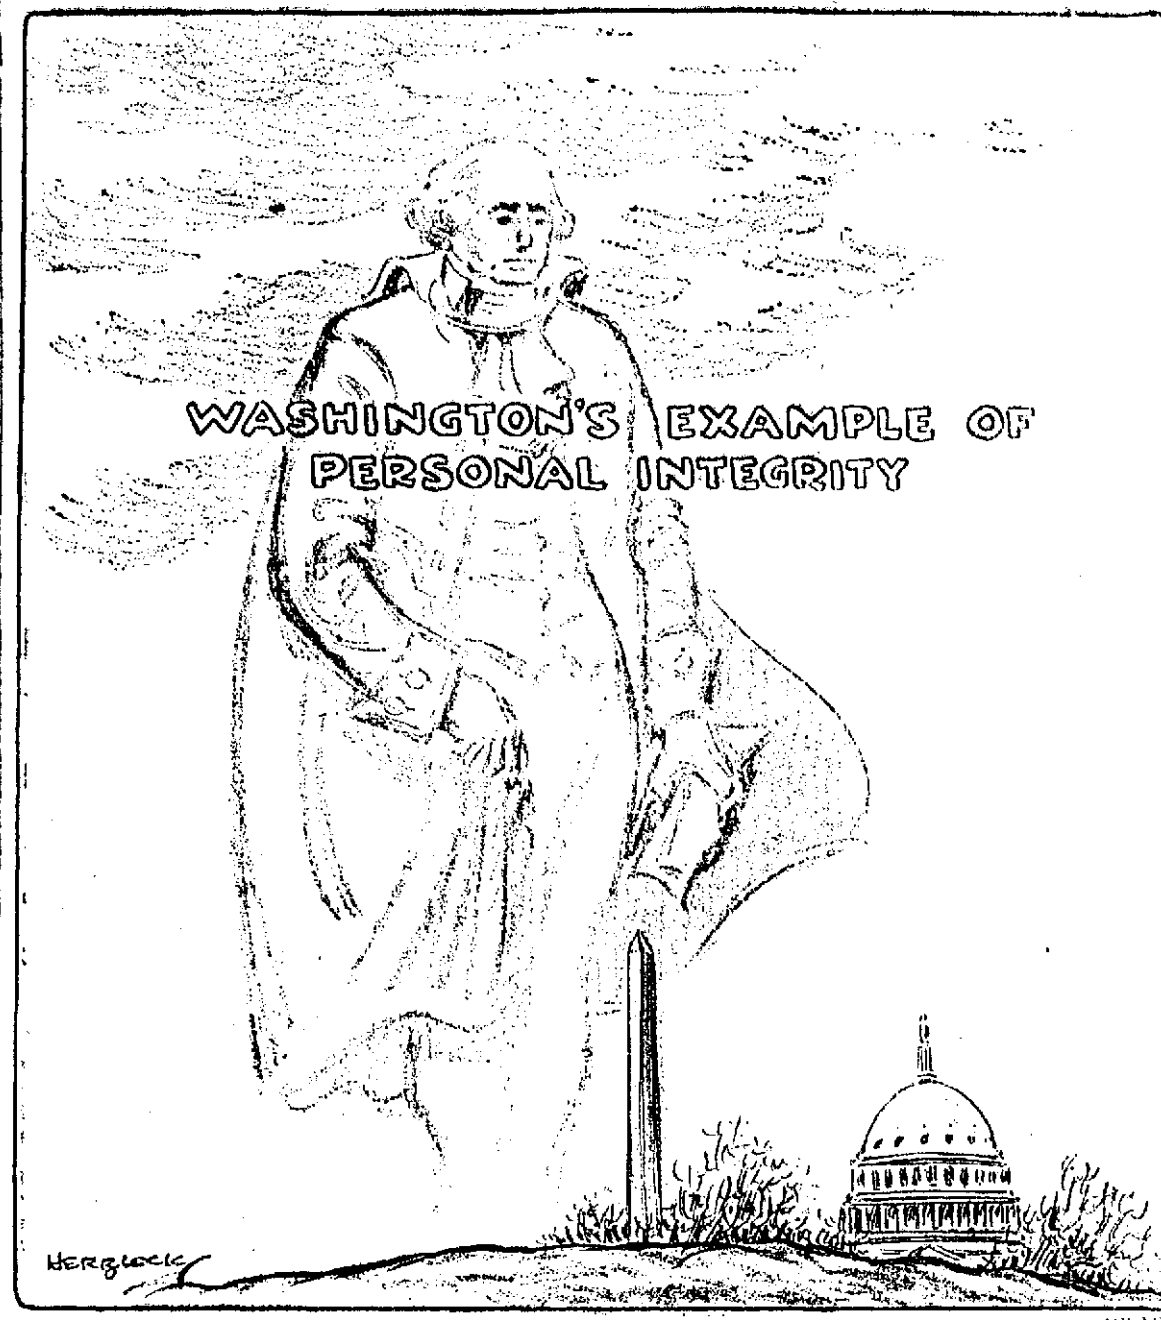

Lacks Bond at School

The same is true of the school. The one she attends may not lay much stress on democracy. If Bessie feels that she is unequal to holding her own in this rare atmosphere, again she will fail to make social contacts. She will be "in" the school, but not "of" it. While it is natural for parents to want to improve their children's chances for the future, to put the onus on them alone is just a bit cruel sometimes.

Third, perhaps Elizabeth is one of life's natural "escapers," and prefers to live vicariously through books, sleep, movies and such. If this is the case, has any attempt been made to get her interested in something that will undermine her inertia; and show her that real experience is far more enjoyable than dreams? Perhaps she has acquired the liking because her parents view everything normal on the grounds that "ladies should stay at home and be good little girls." So often this results in friendliness. Every girl should have some friends.

If too dry, popcorn should be moistened slightly and stored in a closed container for one or two days.

This Can Never Be Out of Date

Quality of Leadership That Was Washington's Is Needed in These Trying Times

—AN EDITORIAL BY BRUCE CATTON—

WASHINGTON'S birthday is always a field day for people who know what ought to be done about the state of the nation.

These people always devote the day to telling us what Washington would do if he were alive now.

He would tell us to leave the League of Nations alone; he would crack down on the Supreme Court; he would abolish government interference with business; he would revive the AAA; he would spend billions on work relief; he would do this, that and the other thing, according to the pet beliefs of the person who is doing the talking, until the average listener gets to wishing that no one would be allowed to mention Washington in connection with anything that happened since 1800.

And yet, when all of the heated verbiage has been consumed, the fact remains that no one can pass the 22nd of February without trying to imagine just how a man like Washington would meet the tremendous problems of this hour.

It is foolish to try to go into details. Some of our most pressing puzzles are things that Washington never heard of; holding companies and power trusts were not known in his day, for instance, and neither were agricultural surpluses or unemployment ment that is numbered by the million.

But we can go part of the way.

We can remember that Washington was absolutely honest and fearless. He never tried to delude himself that things were going well when in fact they were not going well. He never believed that if you sidestep a problem long enough it will eventually cease to be a problem. He had a way of finding out the worst there was to know, making the best possible plan to meet the issue, regardless of whose toes might be stepped on in the process, and then going ahead on that line and hanging on like grim death until the last shot had been fired.

That sort of policy worked, for Washington. It got him—and his nation—through a dozen spots where an ordinary leader would have thrown up his hands. There is no reason to suppose that it would not work again.

And so, while we can't say what Washington would do today, we can figure out how he would go about doing it.

We can, in other words, realize that uncompromising courage, honesty, integrity and determination can solve any problem. They did it in Washington's day; embodied in him, they brought an infant nation through against overwhelming odds. They are the chief things that Washington could give us if he could come back today.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD—Comes now a Mr. Melvyn Douglas, of Georgia, Broadway, and Hollywood, to impugn the artistic integrity of numerous but unnamed performers of the screen. Mr. Douglas:

"You hear a lot of movie people going around talking about the death of thea-tuh, and how they miss it, and how they would like to go back and do something fine in it."

"But somehow they just don't get around to going back. They keep on wallowing in their fine old nostalgia. New York managers beg them to come east for pay, but when all is said and done the idealists are still in Hollywood and still talking about the death of thea-tuh."

"When a player starts slipping in Hollywood and needs the prestige of a Broadway appearance—then he will return, if he can and do a play."

Himself? He's Model

Mr. Douglas's own conscience in these matters probably is spick and span, because he has a two-pictures-a-year, five-months-a-year contract with Columbia, and the arrangement provides enough money and leaves enough time for doing things on Broadway. What he did last season on Broadway was to appear in one play and direct three.

He didn't make a nickel, after everything was totaled up. Two plays were undistinguished; the third, which he staged, had the critics howling halloo. That was "Sean O'Casey's 'Within the Gates.'" It didn't do very well at the box office, and not even a banning by Boston could save it.

It was a brave and eloquent allegory, though, and full enough of heavy words and vague symbolism to qualify as an artistic triumph.

Are Stars Artists?

There's a good deal of doubt in Douglas's mind as to whether actors, as a lot, are half the artists people believe them to be. "A painter, writer, or composer really suffers when his work isn't just right," he observed. "But an actor's sense of values is likely to be mostly commercial. How many actors would turn down a prominent role in a trashy picture or play that is clearly marked for financial success? Very few."

Deserters!

As one who has helped cast some plays in New York and vainly pleaded for the return of talent-gone-Hollywood, Douglas is quite concerned about the future of the legitimate stage. As rapidly as new talent is developed, it deserts to the Gold Coast. Broadway is just a training school for talkie-town.

Only hope he finds for the theater is that picture executives themselves are realizing its importance, putting money into its productions and encouraging their performers to go east occasionally and refresh themselves in applause and the glow of footlights.

Douglas is tall, blond, 34, and not too handsome. In 15 years he has been in some important plays, and his recent picture ("She Married Her Boss") have won him a lot of attention. His wife is Helen Gahagan, almost equally prominent as an actress.

For the Love of It

And speaking of acting for art's sake, which is seldom mentioned seriously in Hollywood, there are some who actually appear before the cameras solely as a hobby. At east there's one.

He's Col. Starrett Ford, former army officer, polo player, ranch owner, and one-time production executive for Cecil B. DeMille. Very comfortably fixed for money, Ford is, yet for the last nine years he has worked as an extra and in minor bit parts, just because he likes to.

Columbia, Ala., with 1,500 population, is said to be the only city its size in the United States with dial telephones.

Shows in the Mother Lode country of California are immediately reflected in a slump in bullion receipts at the San Francisco mint.

LETTERS to the Editor

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy or commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Choose a topic everyone will be interested in. Be brief. Avoid personal abuse. The world's greatest critics were painfully polite. Every writer must sign his name and address.

Congratulates Star

Editor The Star: I have just read your paper of today, and I notice that the "wets" won the local option campaign in this county by a majority of nine votes.

I think this is a victory for law and order. The bootleggers will have to go to some other county to do business. The people of Hempstead county will not have to hide their heads in the sand like an ostrich, and pose as prohibitionists and, at the same time, be patronizing bootleggers. I furthermore think this vote of yesterday is a step towards a state dispensary system; and I think that is the best way to handle the liquor business—which is a problem any way it is viewed.

For the result of the election yesterday, I want to give credit where credit is due, and so I am writing to you. Undoubtedly, the strong attitude taken by your paper was responsible for many week-kneed people having the courage to come out and vote against the advice of the preachers. I do not agree with all of the things you said in some of your editorials; but I certainly endorse the strong, outspoken attitude that you exhibited; and I think the stand of your paper is largely responsible for the outcome of the election; and I am pleased over that outcome.

Now that your paper has won the victory, I think there is imposed on you the obligation to keep fighting for a State dispensary system. Let's force the prohibitionists to agree to a State dispensary system, or else offer some system of liquor control besides the impossible prohibition system.

Again congratulating you, and with kindest personal regards, I am

From North Arkansas

Editor The Star: I noticed in the morning issue of the paper that your county had voted for the legal sale of liquor instead of the illegal sale. I have noticed in my observation of the liquor situation that the legal dealer is not only having the bootlegger to fight but also a group of so called reformers that work hand in hand with the illicit runners.

It seems strange that there is a group of people that think that prohibition was a success. I don't know whether to contribute this to ignorance or radicalism.

You deserve the congratulations of all the law-abiding citizens in your county for the attitude you took in the situation.

Young Frenchmen Angered Because Army Record Follows Them

PARIS (AP)—Young Frenchmen, new required to serve two years in the army, navy or air force, have appealed to future employers not to judge them from their military records.

Protests arose in the nationalist and left press when it was learned that many youths, their military service ended, were unable to find work because they had been in military prisons for minor infractions of discipline. Pierre Thibaud, deputy and leader of a blue-shirted political league, pointed out that the vast majority of conscripts are "only as old as your

Who looks at beauty with glad eyes
And finds in it evidence from care;
Who marks each small and lovely thing
In praising God unawares.
Whose heart lifts up in gratitude
For cloud and leaf and budding stem,
Is sharing the delight he knew
The morning He created them.
Whose eyes are keen to catch the first Faint bird note on the darkened trees,
Can hear the music of the spheres,
The angels' heavenly symphonies.
Who holds his breath at the far scent
Of some wild blossom on the air,

Is voicing an unspoken prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Taylor announce the arrival of a little daughter, Betty Evelyn, Wednesday, February 19, North Elm street.

The Clara Lowther chapter, C. of C. held its February meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Martha Houston, North Pine street, with Miss Martha Eleanor Blackart as joint hostess. The meeting was called to order and following the reading of the minutes and the roll call, the president distributed the new year books, which were bound for the chapter by Mrs. W. O. Shipley. The pledge was repeated in unison and subjects for the essay contest were read by Miss Evelyn Bryant. During the business meeting, it was decided to salute the American and Confederate flags at all future meetings. Plans were discussed for the program to be given for the March meeting of the Pat Cleburne chapter, at which time they will be hosts to the Clara Lowther chapter. The interesting program on Sidney Lanier consisted of a talk on the life of Lanier by Miss Catherine Lane, a piano selection by Miss Martha Houston and a poem on Lanier by Miss Mary Haynes. At the conclusion of the program, the hostesses served a delicious salad course with hot tea to a splendid membership.

C. C. Lewis has returned from St. Louis where he purchased spring stock for the Geo. W. Robinson stores.

Miss Margaret Kinser was hostess on Thursday evening to the members of her club and a few special guests at her home on South Main street. Seasonal flowers brightened the card rooms and attractive favors were won by Miss Opal Garner and Miss Ruth Barrett. Following the game the hostess served a most tempting salad course. Guests other than the club members were Mrs. C. W. Wilkerson, Miss Katherine Bryant, Miss Ruth Barrett, Miss Helen Bowden and Miss Elizabeth Evans.

The regular monthly meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Glenn Williams on East Second street, with a full membership responding to the roll call. The Williams home was bright and attractive with patriotic colors, stressing the George Washington motif. The usual routine of business was dispatched, after which the hostess, observing her chosen motif served cherry pie and coffee. She was assisted by her attractive little daughter, Nannette, who was dainty in a period costume.

Mrs. J. C. Corlton, Mrs. J. O. Milam, Mrs. J. G. Martindale, Mrs. R. T. White and Mrs. John P. Cox motored to Gordon Friday afternoon to attend a George Washington Tea, given by the Gordon Music club at the American Legion hut in that city.

Al Smith Heads Tammany Faction

Will Take New York City Delegation Into National Convention

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Tammany named Alfred E. Smith Tuesday to head its delegation to the Democratic National Convention—from which Smith threatened to "take a walk" if the Roosevelt administration were endorsed.

The former New York governor, who voted to the final ballot against President Roosevelt's nomination at Chicago in 1932, thus secured an opportunity of making good the threat he voiced at a dinner of the Liberty League in Washington.

Former Mayor James J. Walker, a delegate four years ago at the time Roosevelt as governor was honoring charges which led to Walker's resignation from the mayoralty, was disgraced in the selections announced by James J. Dooling, Tammany leader.

While a foe of Roosevelt, Walker also became estranged from Smith.

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE WESTON feels her dreams have come true when she sets out on a three-day ocean cruise, escorted in moment for the salary due her when the magazine for which she writes as travel correspondent publication.

On board the ship she meets handsome DIRK STROM, ex-captain of the U. S. S. "Albatross," who is on his way to Europe as a naval attaché.

Dirk introduced Jane to his friend SNOOK STILES, a detective. Others on board are NORMA LANE, famous actress and singer of the "Riviera," and her manager, MADAME DOREMI, and her assistant, MANNIE JACKSON, who is a famous dancer.

Jane and Dirk are much attracted to each other. She confides to him that she is really tired out of a job and he tells her that he is not the playboy she has thought him.

A misunderstanding arises when each confesses to having dreamed of meeting much more glamorous companions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IX

JANE moved away from Dirk, on the ship's hurricane deck leaving him with his own hurt and injured pride. Hot tears stung her cheeks, but she wouldn't let Dirk see them.

Now they were both aware of a woman, heavily veiled and in an autumn furs, who walked along the rail, pausing at intervals. She was alone. For a moment she stood and looked out over the huge swells in the sea.

Jane watched her breathless. Her figure was of the cast which should remain forever in black velvet or as now in a silhouette against the early evening. There was something imposing about her appearance.

The figure of a man was rapidly approaching her. It appeared as if he were going to speak, and she turned to him revealing her face. She merely looked at the man with an ironic smile. The man walked away hurriedly disconcerted before her smile. He had picked the wrong number!

Jane felt herself trembling "You saw that?" she breathed, low to Dirk. "It makes us see ourselves as we are. I'm a pickup and you're the kind of a man who does."

She saw that he was irked. "Frown crossed his forehead, and a hand went through his blond hair. 'Aren't we a little too serious?' he begged. 'After all, you're a swell girl. I'm a fellow of sorts, even if I'm not a moon-struck opera star. But if that's the way you feel about us, goodnight, Miss Weston—'

"Goodnight, Mr. Strom," Jane walked away her head held proudly erect. Disillusionment had been painful, but there were no tears now. She had the feeling that they had both merely indulged in daisy words. When she got to her room she flung herself down on the berth, and lay there very still.

AFTER she was gone Dirk stood by the rail, nursing his hurt. He didn't see why Jane should be so touchy about a romantic notion he had tried too much to keep. Nature had not been close to him. He had not let his imagination play a little on this cruise. He had wanted to know the sun and the moon and the earth and the stars.

He found himself watching the woman in furs who stood looking out over the water. He felt hypnotized by her poise, and for a moment he forgot the vanity which Jane had surprised in him.

Prescott News in Brief

By DALE McKINNEY

The Rosston Road Home Demonstration club will meet Wednesday, February 26, at the home of Mrs. Joe Regan.

We have a new assistant county agent, Walter Cooper, formerly county agent at Murfreesboro, Pike county. Three guests attended the 1936 club Wednesday evening were Mrs. Allen Gee, Mrs. Clarke White, and Mrs. Orin Ellsworth. Mrs. Watson White was hostess to the guests. After games were played, a delightful hot plate and coffee was served.

Friends of Jack Barr will be glad to learn that he is resting well at the Cora Duncanson hospital, where he has been ill with pneumonia for several days.

G. W. Knox, extension poultryman met at the courthouse Thursday morning and organized a poultry association. About 25 people attended this meeting. They discussed many problems in the raising of poultry.

The Prescott Garden club met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Moore with the president, Mrs. W. W. White, presiding. Committee reports showed that progress is being made on the project of the club of beautifying the two blocks from Walnut to Elm streets along the railroad. Due to the increased traffic on Highway 61 to the Texas Centennial this year, the club feels that this project will mean more to Prescott than anything they can undertake at this time.

A prize has been offered by the Rotary club which is of much interest to all members. An entertaining program was rendered. Talks were made by Mrs. J. W. Teeter, Mrs. W. T. Hart, Mrs. Joe Hamilton and Miss Katherine Heath. Fourteen members were present. The next meeting will be held the third Wednesday in March.

Convicts Ruled Illinois Prison

Sordid Conditions Come to Light as Probe Continues

JOLIET, Ill.—Convicts ran the two branches of the state's prison here and at nearby Statesville, under previous orders, with some of them having the privileges of a high class club, including poker games, white flannel trousers, whisky and political power.

This was the statement of Warden Roy Best of the Colorado state prison at Canon City, and Assistant State Attorney Emmett Moynihan, two members of the commission appointed by Governor Horner, following the slaying to death of Richard Loeb by another convict. The commission is making an inquiry into alleged scandalous conditions.

Some Revelations
With that end in view, the two announced Thursday they had questioned 10 convicts so far and gathered the following facts:

As much as $15,000 in cash in prisoners' possession; "craps" and poker games played openly in the prison yard.

There was one poker game on a cell house table, while guards turned their backs, in which $1,500 changed hands.

Whisky, of the variety known as "rot gut" sold for $1 a pint, having been manufactured in the cells, and drugs were peddled at $1 a "shot in the arm."

Convicts with influence, those who could make donations to guards, strutted about in the summer clad in fine white flannel trousers. These fellows also had jobs in the prison offices which took them out of contact with other prisoners.

Guards running money into the prison to convicts for a "small percentage."

Convict gangs intimidating other convicts into gaining their desires, with threats of political influence.

Warden Amazed
Warden Best, with amazement on his face said:

"Why, I never heard of such things. The convicts were running the prison. There's no doubt in my mind as to that."

The two members of the commission

Farm Girl? Me? The Very Idea!

There's nothing ginghamy about that black scarf and little that's bumpkinish about the alluring vision above, Bonnie Bannan, former Fresno, Calif., beauty queen, so it's difficult to understand why, she claims, her film director husband, Charles Faye, called her a "dumb little farm girl." Anyway, indignant, she divorced Faye, brother of Actress Alice.

made it plain that the new warden, Joseph Ragan, had changed things considerably but that there was much more to be done.

When popping tests show the corn is "right," it should be placed in a closed container.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

PEOPLE BEFORE PROPERTY
Text: Luke 8:26-37
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Feb. 23.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

The story of the Gerasenes (in the King James Version called Gadarenes) and the swine, upon which this lesson is based, has puzzled many people. To some of freely critical mind, it has seemed so different from anything else in the New Testament that they have wondered whether it had an authentic place in the record at all; yet it has some very clear and definite teachings, the application of which is decidedly marked in relation to life today.

The story itself is simple. As Jesus went through this country of the Gerasenes, adjoining Galilee, He met a man possessed of demons, or who was, as we would say, insane. The man's insanity took the form of sending him forth from his fellows to live in the tombs, unkept and unclothed. When the poor fellow saw Jesus, there was fulfilled the saying, "the devils also feared and trembled," for in his madness he ruled against the Master. When Jesus asked him his name, he replied that it was Legion, for many demons had entered into him.

The story has a strange aspect, as the demons are represented as asking in that, if they were cast out of the man, they should not be hurled into the abyss, but should be allowed to enter a herd of swine feeding on the mountains. The record is that when the demons had gone into the swine the latter rushed down a steep place into the lake and were drowned.

Interpreted upon any literal basis, inquiry might well be made why the gentle Jesus in healing the maniac should have destroyed the hogs or sent them to such an end. The above reply would be that the hogs were intended to be slaughtered anyway, and that no question of mercy or humanity is involved in the form of their destruction.

The story manifestly is strange and puzzling, but the teachings that come from it are very clear and practical. These Gerasenes, by their law and religion, were forbidden the use of pork. So far as their religion was concerned, they were engaged in an illicit and prohibited business, for the sake of gain. They would not eat the hogs themselves, but they would sell them to other people.

Waving aside any question of the propriety of eating pork, a question that the non-Jewish world has solved in its own way, the teaching is obvious. There always have been in the world, and there are today, the sort of people who are far more concerned about their self-interest and profit than they are about the welfare of their fellow men.

Here were these Gerasenes, utterly unmindful of the fact that the poor maniac had been healed and put in his right mind, but deeply concerned about the loss of their profit in pork.

How many modern parallels one could find! Such an attitude, too, always has its larger consequences.

The Gerasenes asked Jesus to depart out of their country. When he given his life over to selfishness and meanness, there is no place left for Jesus; He immediately becomes an unwelcome guest.

How large are the areas in our modern world that we do not wish Jesus to enter!

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

BUILDER OF GUATEMALA

DISSENTERS felt the stern hand of a military dictator when they sought to overturn the rule of President Justo Rufino Barrios of Guatemala more than a half century ago. Barrios, born in 1835, educated for the bar, had fought in a revolution himself before he attained the presidency.

But, once in office, he built the country's first railway, laid out new roads, repaired old ones, and constructed new bridges. He modernized the police force, improved educational facilities, and introduced telegraph service.

All this time, however, he had to fight off internationalists. Twice assassins endangered his life. Finally, fearfully, almost thoughtlessly, leading his army in a war with Salvador, he was ambushed and killed.

In 1925, on the centennial of Barrios' birth, Guatemala issued a set of eight stamps depicting incidents in his life. One is shown here.

Cardui is a purely vegetable medicine for the relief of functional periodic pain, nervousness and weakness due to poor nourishment. It is in successful use by thousands of women.

"I have used Cardui and had good result from its use," writes Mrs. W. E. Barnett, of Taylors, N. C. "I suffered with cramping and headaches and would have a chilly feeling. Sometimes I would feel miserable and have more than a day, and I would be nervous. I read of Cardui and decided to use it. After taking six bottles of Cardui, I had less pain and was regulated. 'Flying Tank' Visioned as New War Monster

A terrifying war machine that appears like the embodiment of a fantastic dream is the "flying tank" shown in the upper photographic composite with the plane that would carry it, in plans being developed by Walter J. Christie of New York, inventor of the convertible speed tank shown in the lower photo. The tank is shown suspended under the plane's fuselage. In landing, the wheels of the plane are lowered. The tank, its inventor asserts, is capable of traveling 65 miles an hour with caterpillars attached and 90 miles an hour without them. Its adoption is being considered by the U. S. government.

New York Giants Lack Fire of Famous Old Team of McGraw

Harry Grayson Opens Series of Three Articles on Troubles of the New York Nationals

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK—So near and yet so far is the story of William Harold Terry, the manager. No other baseball leader came so close to being a miracle man without being decorated with the laurel wreath.

They talk about the current New York Giants not having the iron fiber and color of the old John McGraw, Mike Donlin, and Larry Doyle days. That is true, but it may not be Terry's fault. Memphis Bill fits with the bright young ball players of today in business acumen, imagination, general appearance, and modern makeup, but the hard-fighting, two-fisted baseball of the old days runs in his veins. He has bridged the two generations.

Terry being named as the successor to the great McGraw in mid-season of 1932 occasioned no little surprise. Bill was a great first baseman. There was no question about that. But he seemed to lack the color demanded of a man replacing the fiery McGraw. Signing of Terry as a player had always been a headache to Charles A. Stoneham and McGraw, too.

Terry's appointment showed that Stoneham and McGraw were big enough to recognize the caliber of their first baseman, despite differences. Terry's subsequent success proved the soundness of their judgment.

Giant Fortunes at Low Ebb When Terry Took Charge

Giant fortunes were at an exceedingly low ebb when Terry assumed command. A club that promised so much in the spring finished a scraggly sixth.

Attendance fell away with the decline, until only handfuls of customers assembled at the Polo Grounds. It was not until the 1933 campaign was well along and the Giants had demonstrated their ability to remain in front that the array won back its supporters.

Terry performed a really worthwhile managerial feat in bringing the Giants down in front in 1933.

Memphis Bill did this with the aid of four remarkable pitchers, Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher, Fred Fitzsimmons, and Tarran Farnellee. A tall blond kid who couldn't lift his weight in the minors played heroic ball at shortstop, and kept it up until the Giants had taken four out of five from an outstanding Washington lineup in the world series. Blondy Ryan was his name.

Terry's holdover contract for 1934 was torn up and he was given a new five-year agreement at $27,000 per. He was placed in supreme command, and his prospects for becoming one of the game's great managers were very bright.

Memphis Bill Unable to Hold His Men Together in Stretch

Terry put the club back on its feet financially. The Giants earned $480,000 in 1935. Terry has yet to make a bad deal.

There is only one flaw in Terry's managerial record, or rather two, for twice have the Giants collapsed like so many camp stools when they seemed to have the flag in the bag. Since his first and only pennant-gathering success, the man from Dixie has been utterly unable to hold his men together in the stretch run.

Terry's world tumbled about him in the fall of 1934. The brilliant head man of 1933 became a goat. On September 7, with only 23 games left, the Giants had a lead of 7½ games. The St. Louis Cardinals were coming along to be sure, but it was believed that the New York combination, playing at home, couldn't miss repeating.

Yet out of those 23 games the Giants copped exactly 10, and lost the last five straight, the final two to the despised Brooklyn. The Dodgers definitely knocked the Giants out of the pennant, which the Cardinals clinched when the masterful Dizzy Dean shut out the Cincinnati Reds, 9-0, on the final day of the season.

On that final Sunday, Terry was booed as no Giant player ever was booed at the Polo Grounds. Flabbergasted him the Bronx cheer, jeering him for a careless remark of the previous February, when, in reply to a question about the Dodgers, Memphis Bill said: "Brooklyn? Are the Dodgers still in the league?"

New York Club Proves 1934 Flop No Fluke

The Giants faded in three weeks for the most colossal flop in the history of the business.

"We just got tired and couldn't make the grade," explained Terry. "Maybe I made some bad guesses but the boys never stopped hustling."

The Giants were 9½ games in front last summer, when the Detroit Tigers believed that they finally were going to appear in a world series at the Polo Grounds.

But the Giants again blew, despite the fact that two other clubs, the Cardinals and Pittsburgh Pirates, raced the ultimate winners, the Chicago Cubs, right up to the wire. The Giants launched their final western excursion still very much in the running.

If the rest of the team could have played like Terry, the Giants probably would have grabbed the gonfalon. Memphis Bill knocked the cover off the ball on the final western trip—in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Chicago. Especially in Pittsburgh they couldn't get him out.

Farnellee had lost his magic, however, and only Hank Leibert, the young center fielder, gave Terry much help in the attack.

The result was more talk that the proud Giants choked up when pressure was applied near the close of the run.

It also again was said that when the Giants cried for leadership, Terry was unable to do anything about the situation.

NEXT: Bill Terry, the leader.

NAMES in the NEWS

One of the first things a cub reporter learns is that names make news. There are two kinds of names which make news. Names of people. And names of things—products and services—things which touch you more closely than the thunderings of a Senator or the escapades of a Prince.

Look through the advertisements in this newspaper and you'll see names you've known most of your life. Dependable names—names that stand for value—announcing improvements in quality, improvements in service, new and better ways to perform old household tasks, ways to save money and raise your standard of living.

Follow the news those names are making, day after day. Read the advertisements regularly, and use them as millions of other people are doing—to keep up-to-date in the world of goods and services; to save time, effort and trouble in shopping; to help budget your expenditures and get the most for your money.

Painless Dentistry Method Outlined

At First, Onlookers Thought It Was Case of Hypnotism

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Attentive dentists suspected that they were watching a case of hypnotism when Dr. Leonard Hartman of Columbia University made his first public demonstration of his new pain-killer for use in filling teeth.

He had been called in to the university dental clinic because a small girl refused to let a student dentist continue. She was crying with pain. Those at the clinic did not know he had a new desensitizing mixture.

They scarcely noticed as he placed a drop of a mixture of thymol, alcohol and ether in the cavity. Thymol and alcohol are a common antiseptic in dental use. They did not get the significance of the pause of a minute after Dr. Hartman had applied the pain-killer.

After that moment, Dr. Hartman motioned the student to continue his work. The child did not move an eyelash. She felt no more pain. At first onlookers thought she had been hypnotized.

In about 500 trials of the pain-killer made before giving the formula to the dental profession at a meeting of 2000 cheering dentists here, there were many similar experiences.

The Hartman desensitizer does not numb, and was not intended to mean that there is never to be any more pain in dental work. It is intended to relieve a specific pain.

There is good reason to believe that the pain relieved includes much of the misery dental patients dread.

Dr. Hartman's desensitizer anesthetizes the dentine, the hard ivory substance lying beneath the enamel, and composing most of the solid substance in which drilling has to be done.

The structure of the tooth is first the outer enamel, second dentine which is most of its internal substance and third, deep in the center the pulp cavity, where the nerve lies. Most fillings and drilling never penetrate to the pulp cavity. The Hartman desensitizer is not intended for use there. It works, as far as now known, only on the dentine. It is based on a theory of Dr. Hartman's, which differed from the general belief that pain of drilling was due to pressure of the dentine on the nerve in the pulp cavity.

It Costs Little
Dr. Hartman believed that the dentine itself was sensitive. The five hundred cases seem to prove him right. His difficulty was not to find a pain-killer but one which was harmless and would last.

This he accomplished by mixing ether and alcohol with thymol. The latter combines with fatty substances in the dentine to make a seal for the ether and alcohol. This anesthetic is cheap, a few cents an application, it was given to the dental profession without patent or other restrictions. It burns if it touches the flesh.

Doubters have claimed it would destroy the nerve. The Columbia experiments include filling teeth with its aid, and four months later taking out the fillings and examining the nerve. In one year's time no killing of nerves or other bad effects have been found.

Action In Old Cavity
It does not kill the dentine pain until it comes in contact with live tooth tissue. Thus when placed in the decay of a new cavity of short duration it is likely to kill the drill pain immediately. Because it still can contact live tissues.

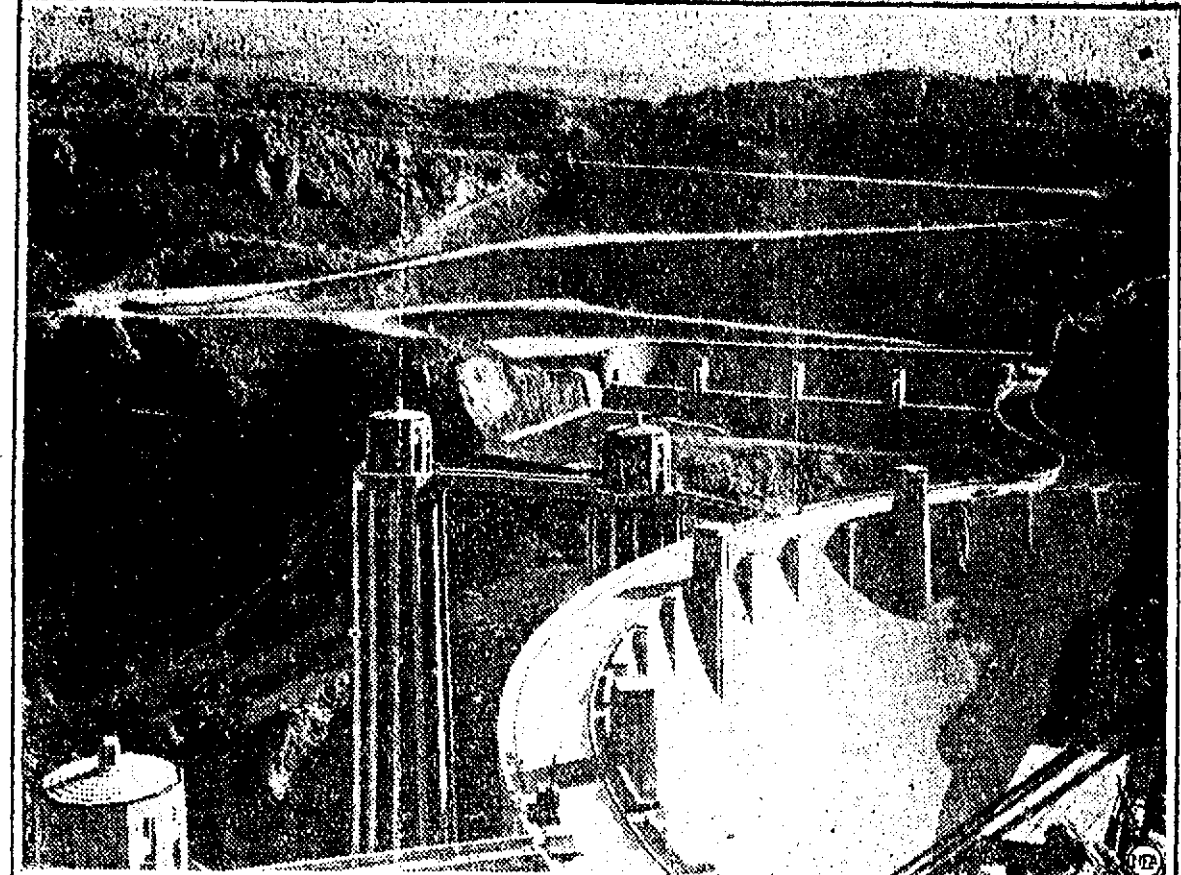

But in an old cavity it may not relieve the pain until the decay is cut through. For old decay acts like a cauterizing surface over the live dentine. It does not work in a cavity containing any moisture. When it was announced 2,000 dentists in New York bought out the available drug store supplies.

Some of them were given old thymol, impure either and impure alcohol. These mixtures are reported to have failed.

Some patients say the difference is that without the desensitizer the drill feels like cutting marble—with the pain-killer, it feels like cutting chalk.

So minute are tobacco seeds that a thimbleful will furnish enough plants for an acre of ground.

Scenery of Rare Beauty Frames Boulder Dam Road

Winding down Black Canyon, over the crest of Boulder dam, which is its bridge across the chasm of the Colorado river, the new highway from Kingman, Ariz., to Las Vegas, Nev., is shown here, outstanding against rugged mountain scenery of majestic beauty. In the background of the four-lane route over the dam crest may be seen the Arizona spillway. Water slowly rising behind the dam, eventually will come almost to the observation platform on the intake towers seen at the left.

richest claims were able to make money.

When Leven was sent to survey the district, he was impressed at once with the possibility that airplanes, heretofore used only on prospecting trips and sparingly, might be the means of opening up the new field. Resigning his job, he bought a small plane and hired a pilot. This craft became the nucleus of Guinea Airways, Inc.

Best Placer Land

In Sydney he met Charles A. Banks, a successful mining engineer now of San Francisco, who joined the venture. A wide expanse of level ground in the midst of towering mountains—an area which has proved to be the best placer land developed to date—was cleared for a landing field. In 1931 operations got under way.

The first year resulted in recovery of 10,442 ounces of bullion, two-thirds gold, one-third silver. In the last year for which figures are available production was 185,665 ounces.

The company has expanded its air fleet until it is now worth $325,000. The giant three-motor planes are especially built to carry freight. One shaft weighing 8,550 pounds was flown over the mountains from the coastal base at Loe.

The machinery flown to Bulolo consists of four dredges, which excavate the gravel and recover the gold, a 3,500-horse power hydro-electric plant, and a large variety of miscellaneous equipment. The Bulolo fleet has flown for nearly five years and carried more than 14,000 tons of freight without accident.

to be appropriated and disbursed under the retirement act.

This is a statement which takes on special interest when it is realized that although the giant social security law covers both benefits and taxes in a single act, it is not stated anywhere in the act that taxes are to be segregated to pay these particular benefits.

What Might Happen
The old-age benefit section of the security act alone contemplates that "eventually a reserve of $17,000,000,000—bigger by half than the present national debt—will be built up in the treasury from unsegregated taxes paid by employer and employee."

If the government takes the position that this fund "bears no relation" to benefits due under the security act, that it is just like any other money and can be used to pay any government obligation, how safe are the old-age reserves?

Emanuel Levi, president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' association, recently pictured what might happen when, in the future, a bill is proposed to meet the current expense of the old-age security plan. "You know from experience," said Levi, "what the temper, the attitude and the make-up of an average congress is. The bill is up for discussion and a congressman calls attention to the fact that there is already in this fund several billions of dollars and that for several years the income has exceeded the outgo. He calls attention to the many other good purposes to which this idle fund could be placed, reciting a few of his own pet projects as well as those of many others. You guess the outcome."

Certainly the political involvements of this manner of legislating, as well as its economic and constitutional aspects, hint at highly interesting possibilities.
